This seminar provides engineers, architects, building code officials, and contractors with more flexibility to easily and quickly design concrete masonry systems. A new structural design standard has been developed by The Masonry Society (TMS) titled Direct Design Handbook for Masonry Structures. This direct design procedure is a table-based structural design method that permits the user, by following a specific series of steps, to design and specify the vast majority of, concrete masonry bearing-wall structures in compliance with the 2008 MSJC Code and Specification, ASCE 7-05 (Supplement No. 1), and the 2009 International Building Code.

FAST – CODE COMPLIANT – NO CALCULATIONS NEEDED
EVERYTHING YOU NEED IS IN EASY TO READ TABLES
MASONRY DESIGN MADE EASY, FAST AND ECONOMICAL.

This program meets AIA/CES criteria for Continuing Education. Architects and Engineers will receive a certificate for 4.0 Unit Hours Health, Safety & Welfare for attending this event.
